

This was my very first blood drive I have participated in, I have a bad fear of needles but I pulled myself through and it went better than I thought. The people drawing the blood were trained and were kind as they could be. There is only one sad part to all of this, I was unable to donate blood because after finding a vein, they ended up losing it afterwards. So I was sad that I wasn't able to donate, but I am happy that I participated and I will go and donate somewhere else at another time.

It was a good experience overall, they were good, understanding people and they tried to create a good first experience.
